GOSSIP IN WASHINGTON

A CHAPTER IN PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S ADMINISTRATION.

The Cabinet and its Methods—Some Members who Talk and Some who Will Not—Fitting the White House—Midsummer Inactivity—News Notes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The departure of the president and his cabinet for the summer brings the first chapter of the administration to a close. When they get back it will be autumn, and the approaching session of congress will give a new direction to affairs. In the five months now ended the administration has become familiar with, and, on the whole, liked in Washington, chiefly because it lets the clerk alone. President Cleveland has made a deep impression as a plain-spoken, plain-dealing, obstinate man. He has established his personality more clearly on the cabinet than any president since Grant. This is shown, among other things, in the symmetry of department changes. It is evident that one system, and that directed by the president, underlies them.

There is a silent administration. It is careful and sparing of speech, differing in this respect from its Republican predecessors. This is particularly noticeable in its attitude toward the newspapers. The president is not a ready talker, and he and his cabinet are disposed to weigh their words. As between Arthur and Cleveland it might be hard to choose, as far as courtesy goes. It is a matter of etiquette that the president is a whole world away from the society of the press when some newspaper writer does not see him and to them he expresses his views. Mr. Arthur always treated reporters civilly, but they rarely got much news from him. President Cleveland has not such urbane manners, but is accessible, and is communicative with persons he has found to be trustworthy. To strangers he is little to say.

The secretary of state is supposed to say nothing publicly, and this is especially true in the traditions of the office. His expressions are models of elegant obscurity. He talks, perhaps, a trifle more fluently than his predecessor, the late Mr. Frelinghuysen, who was a very direct man indeed. Postmaster Gen. Vilas is the orator of the cabinet, and he is well thought of for the way he carries the platform into the parlor, so that his visitor feels like the municipal clerk of a village, an audience of one. Frank Blair, his predecessor, was a gentleman of western business man, never at a loss for a sharp word. The two southern members, Secretary Cass and Attorney General Garland, are not loquacious, especially the attorney general, and Secretary Manning is hard upon to get the best of. The cabinet secretaries, Judge Edgerton and Mr. Whitney, are reserved and silent. So that, as a group, the members of the cabinet have not put themselves on familiar terms with the newspapers, office seekers, gossipers of the public in general. It is to be remarked that there is not a political machine among them, while in the late administration there was "Clats," "Bib," a "Frank" and a "Bill."

The members of the cabinet, like the president, are very hard workers. They come early to office and leave late, do much work at home at night, and take few holidays. Their chief business thus far has been to hear and decide on the claims of office-holders, and to make the necessary orders. The most striking contrast in any office, perhaps, is in that of the attorney general. Garland is the antipode of Brewster in every respect. He is a quiet, unassuming man, has been fairly dramatic. Secretary Whitney is rather the gentleman of the administration. He has wit and culture, handles his pen and publishes his papers. He occupies a fine house near the British legation, besides owning a country seat in the suburbs, which he bought recently, and where he invites his colleagues occasionally to quiet lunches. He has also entertained the cabinet handsomely on several occasions, notably the fishing excursion to Woodmont. His latest act of courtesy was to charter a special car and tender it to the army and navy officers who went to the Grant obsequies. But Mr. Whitney is a stern secretary, and his course toward Kitch and the old and valiant army has excited a tidal current of opposition to the department.

His neighbor in the great state department building, Judge Edgerton, has heretofore done little to excite remark, but his order touching staff duty will make his life a burden. The order strikes at the root of one of the longest and best established customs of the department. Not long ago the cabinet secretaries have recognized it, notably Secretary Lincoln, whose discipline of the army would have been strict to harshness had he been backed up by Mr. Edgerton. It is no doubt he will enforce his order and give all the youngsters a fair and equal taste of the "staff" plan.

Outside of the cabinet one of the men in whom President Cleveland reposes great confidence is Representative Morrison. The president gave Morrison the status of a senator elect in the distribution of patronage in Illinois, and the two men enjoy close personal relations. Not long ago Mr. Morrison was given the honor of being named as Illinois congressman by the president on local appointments. Mr. Cleveland heard his statements, and asked him now he stands with Morrison. The congressman replied that they were friendly but added that he thought he could stand alone.

"Certainly," answered Mr. Cleveland. "I shall always treat you with due consideration as a representative, but Morrison is a man who is worth a good man to the; just remember that."

Morrison is evidently in high favor. The Illinois appointments show that conclusively. He is certain to be chairman in the ways and means committee again, if he wants the place, as the current relation between him and Mr. Carlisle have been strengthened of late by various circumstances. On the other hand, there is a belief that German influence is waning. It is generally supposed that the appointment of Higgins lost German the key to the White House. Still it was only the other day that Mr. Cleveland appointed one of Gorman's closest friends to a fat office. This was Morris Thomas, who was sent out by the National Democratic committee to go ahead of Blaine in Ohio and furnish the newshy with copies of the Whittaker letters to peddle on Main street. Thomas might be classed by some among very offensive partisans, but he has been made an Indian insider at a large salary. Washington perhaps never so completely deserted by its official population. The president, the members of the cabinet, the supreme court, senators and representatives, and the military officers of high rank, the leading bureau officers, and the diplomatic corps are all gone. The departments are all closed, and the clerks scattered for a universal holiday. The White House presents a forlorn aspect. The halls are deserted, and the doors bear the legend "Closed," and the whole mansion is once more in the possession of the Republican machine. The only door that is open is Arthur was off on his fishing trip. The building will be kept closed until the president's return. The experts and courtiers have already been taken down, cleaned and packed away, under the direction of Miss Cleveland. Now all the chancellors will be taken down and cleaned, and placed in the East Room are composed of many thousands of bits of glass, and cover the whole floor of the room when taken down and distributed.

Gen. Grant's favorite war horse, Cincinnati, is to have an honorable appearance at his master's annual dinner at the Admiral Anson's farm, near Washington, where he died some years ago. They are now to be taken down and cleaned, and placed in the East Room are composed of many thousands of bits of glass, and cover the whole floor of the room when taken down and distributed.

LIEUTENANT MULLEN PARDONED

Mr. Cleveland Thinks He "Probably Will" Appreciate the Duties.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—The military and the executive department, at Washington, upon it, arrived at the Hamilton county jail, and caused the release of the prisoner. The name of Mike Mullen, sentenced to one year's confinement by Judge Sage, of the United States court, for violation of the federal election laws, for the first time.

[Mullen, it will be remembered, captured a boatload of old brandy at the mouth of John's, on the river, and put them into Hammond street station, where they claimed they were prevented from voting and were taken into custody. He was released on January 8, and has served twenty-two of his term.

The pardon was given on the grounds for the action of the president, the general good reputation of the prisoner; the fact that his application was signed by many first-class citizens; that Mullen probably misapprehended his duties, and "various other reasons," and gave him a full and unconditional pardon.

It was stated last week that Mullen would not accept his pardon, but he has now changed his mind and has accepted it. He was released on January 8, and has served twenty-two of his term. The pardon was given on the grounds for the action of the president, the general good reputation of the prisoner; the fact that his application was signed by many first-class citizens; that Mullen probably misapprehended his duties, and "various other reasons," and gave him a full and unconditional pardon.

J. L. Case's Loss.

RACINE, Wis., Aug. 11.—The storm was one of the severest of the season, rain having fallen continuously for forty-eight hours. The country near Racine is flooded and crops are lying flat. Much hay has been spoiled by rain, and some wheat is growing in the street. Lightning struck one of the electric wires, extinguishing the light in that circuit. On the stock farm of J. L. Case, one mile south of the city, his stock was killed. Butter worth $400 and a yearling calf valued at $30, were killed by lightning, the flames for many of the time occurring over his head. It has been estimated that in the city many cattle are flooded.

Found Dead.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The dead body of Mrs. M. Walsh, a widow lately residing at 400 Fulton street, was found in a room of her house. The old lady had been found murdered by evidence by a couple tightly packed in the room. There is little doubt that robbery was the object of the murder. The woman lived alone, associating very little with her neighbors. It has been rumored that she kept large sums of money in the house, which she collected from her tenants. There is no clue to the perpetrator.

Falling Walls.

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 11.—A wall of the American pencil company's three story brick factory, at Fifth and Clinton streets, fell today, and the building was seriously damaged. The wall was excavating in an adjoining lot, and who carelessly had undermined the building. The wall was 100 feet high and it is feared others are under the delirium. The factory is nearly ruined.

GLADSTONE'S ILLNESS.

SCAPEGRACE JEFFREY AND HIS INDIAN BUDGET SPEECH.

The Office Scandal Claiming the Undivided Attention of Gladstone's Friends—Shamshad Sir Charles—Mr. Crawford's Divorce—Notes.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—The whole future of the Liberal party of the British empire depends upon the result of Mr. Gladstone's voyage. His voice continues bad, and it is doubtful if he ever recovers sufficiently to make another great speech. In the meantime everything is in suspense. The Whigs and Liberals are aware that they must wait for each other. Chamberlain hates to drive to Hartington, and Hartington is driven to fury by Chamberlain's palpable attempt to push him aside. The temporary eclipse of Sir Charles Dilke encourages Hartington to the verge of despair, and through them Chamberlain. The letter retorts with more pronounced Radical speeches than ever. Mr. Gladstone's illness, moreover, suspends the declaration of the Liberal policy for the general elections, which cannot be much longer delayed.

The Tories are not much better off. Churchill has again stamped on his lines by the success of his Indian budget speech. His friends had the speech as a fine election appeal. Everybody admits that the scapegrace handles the figures with ease and clearness. The ministry still advances its prestige by pushing foreign affairs with Bismarck's aid, and rapidly carrying on the business of parliament. The latter encourages the Liberal, who is so much better off. Churchill has again stamped on his lines by the success of his Indian budget speech. His friends had the speech as a fine election appeal. Everybody admits that the scapegrace handles the figures with ease and clearness. The ministry still advances its prestige by pushing foreign affairs with Bismarck's aid, and rapidly carrying on the business of parliament. The latter encourages the Liberal, who is so much better off.

Some days ago Mr. Philip Callan, member for Louth, while detaching a clause in the criminal amendment bill called attention to the infamies which had been dragged to the surface of the great old Jeffries, and mentioned among other things the high station in life occupied by some of that notorious class of criminals who were many times interrupted when he reached that part of his remarks and there was an evident purpose on the part of certain members to interrupt the speaker. Mr. Callan, however, was not to be deterred, and shaking his finger shouted: "Don't provoke me further. I know some of mine. I shall be compelled to say things that you will regret to hear, probably, more than I shall delight to give utterance to them. I trust I shall use no dirty words."

The house was still in a moment and Mr. Callan was subjected to no further interruption. The speaker, however, which Mr. Callan intimated that he was possessed was obtained a few days previous to the episode in the house, when he brought into the lobby the names of some of the criminals who he acted in the capacity of hall porter for Mrs. Jeffries when the property of that notorious woman was sold.

With a view of securing his identification of such members as had frequented the house in the capacity of hall porter, Mr. Callan's name was introduced into the lobby and seeing familiar faces about him he exclaimed: "For God's sake, take me away from here. I recognize some of the men who I have admitted into Mrs. Jeffries' house."

When asked to point them out he did so. Mr. Callan's remarks, however, have not received respectful attention they have at least been free from interruption or rebuke. The speaker, however, which Mr. Callan intimated that he was possessed was obtained a few days previous to the episode in the house, when he brought into the lobby the names of some of the criminals who he acted in the capacity of hall porter for Mrs. Jeffries when the property of that notorious woman was sold.

The long vacation of the judges, which has now begun, will probably accelerate a postponement of the trial for perhaps six months. It is asserted that Charles Dilke has been intimate with other members of the family of Mrs. Crawford, which is closely connected with his own by marriage. Efforts are being made to keep the case within the limits of the single issue between Mr. Crawford and the plaintiff, Mrs. Crawford, and to prevent any side issues being introduced. Mr. Henry James for Dilke. The probable effect of the scandal upon the result of the general elections in some of the districts is not a considerable curiosity.

It is at present intended to limit the scandal to the parties immediately concerned. Mrs. Annan Dilke has been affected by it. Mrs. Crawford has declined to instruct her counsel and will appeal to her husband for his careful consideration of her feelings. The effect of the scandal in London. It is believed the lawyers will suppress the details of the case and limit the case to the evidence as to a divorce. Sir Charles Dilke's face as he sat in the house of commons on Friday night bore traces of mental suffering. He sat quite alone, his eyes bloodshot and fixed steadily upon an official paper which he had in his hand. Two or three times when some friend passing his seat spoke to him, he smiled in a forced, sickly manner, drew his hat over his eyes and moved out of the glare of the light. Shortly before the house adjourned he stole silently out and disappeared.

BLAINE'S EULOGY ON GRANT.

An Eloquent Tribute to His Patriotism and Military Greatness.

ACQUITA, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Memorial services were held here. At the exercises held in Granite church, a eulogy was delivered by the Hon. James G. Blaine. He said in part:

"As long as the American Union shall abide, with its blessings of law and liberty, Grant's name shall be remembered with honor. As long as the slavery of human beings shall be abhorred and the freedom of man assured, Grant shall be recalled with gratitude, and in the cycles of the future Lincoln's life can never be told without associating Grant in the enduring splendor of his own great military genius. Grant's premacy was honestly earned, without factions and without extraneous help. He had no influence to urge his promotion except his own achievements. He had no potential friends except those whom his victories won to him. He rose from obscurity to become a great leader in history—from the command of a single regiment to the supreme direction of a million men, divided into many great armies, and operating over an area as large as the empire of Germany and Austria combined."

"He exhibited extraordinary qualities in the field. Bravery among American officers is a rule which has, happily, had few exceptions, but Grant's was a quality which he possessed in a quality above bravery. He had an insensibility to danger, apparently an unconsciousness of fear. Besides that, he possessed an extraordinary calmness and coolness upon in sublime and in storm. Napoleon said: 'The rarest attribute among generals is preserving their heads above the water.' Grant, he added, 'unprepared courage, that which is necessary on an unexpected occasion, and which, in spite of the most unexpected events, leaves the mind free of judgment and promptness of decision.' No better description could be given of the type of courage which distinguished Grant."

"His constant readiness to fight was another quality which, according to the same great authority, established him as a commander. 'Generals,' said the exile at St. Helena, 'are rarely found eager to give battle; they choose their position, consider their conditions, and their inclination begins. Nothing, added this greatest warrior of modern times, 'nothing is so difficult as to engage the enemy, and to win the battle, and never once exhibited indecision, and it was this quality that gave him his crowning characteristic as a military leader. He inspired his soldiers with confidence, and his ability, and they were therefore invincible.'"

"The career of Gen. Grant, when he passed from the ranks of a private soldier to a general, was marked by his strong qualities. His presidency of eight years was filled with events which, in the history of the world, were of the highest importance. His career was sometimes questioned, his patriotism was always canceled. He entered upon his office after the angry disturbance caused by the singular election of Gen. Grant, and quickly enforced a policy which had been for four years the cause of unbridled depredations. His election, however, proved in one important aspect a landmark in the history of the country. For nearly fifty years preceding the event, there had been few presidential elections in which the fate of the Union had not in some degree been agitated, either by the threats of political parties, or by the intrigues of ambitious politicians. The Union was saved by the victory of the army command by Gen. Grant. No man could have done what he has ever been since Gen. Grant's victory before the people."

"Death always brings a flag of truce over its own. The flag of Gen. Grant and his peaceful intentions, passions are still, benevolence is restored, wrongs are repaired. The country is at peace, and the peace is so long, so prominent, so positive as that of Gen. Grant should have provoked strife and engendered enmity. For more than twenty years, from the death of Lincoln to the close of his own life, Gen. Grant was the most conspicuous man in America, one to whom the people looked for leadership, and whom parties built their hopes of victory to whom personal friends by tens of thousands offered their sincere devotion. It was according to the nature of the struggle of human nature that counter movements should come; that Gen. Grant's primacy should be challenged; that his party should be resisted; that his devoted friends should be confronted by jealous men in his own ranks and by bitter enemies in the ranks of his opponents. But all these passions and all these resentments are buried in the grave which today receives his remains. Confusion is no longer power. The controversy is over, and the Union is at peace. The civil administration closes, as Democrats and Republicans unite in pronouncing him to have been in every act and every aspiration an American patriot."

A Weak Dam.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 11.—The board of public works was called out to see a recently constructed river dam at South Milwaukee, and reported the structure to be in a shaky condition, with several bad leaks. Tributary streams have been swollen to an alarming extent by the recent heavy rains, and the surplus waters are just beginning to reach this city. Fully thirty inches of water was running over the dam, and the structure was expected to give out. It is not thought possible that the dam can withstand the pressure of the water, and wholesale establishments on east Water and west Water streets is likely to be great.

PARIS, III., Aug. 11.—During the firing of a National salute, a premature discharge of a cannon killed Spencer Jones, a member of the arm of Henry Plant, chief of the department, and badly wounded the other. Mike Wagoner was also seriously injured.

Its projectors are sanguine of success, despite the financial failure of the late world's exposition in New Orleans.

Ruggles' Camp Meeting.

RUGGLES' CAMP, August 8, 1885. The young people's meeting at the tabernacle at 6:30 p. m. was conducted by Rev. A. M. Abbott. The meeting was animated and devotional.

At 8 p. m. Mrs. Vonholz and daughter, Miss Ida, held service. There were about 600 people in the tabernacle. The Bible reading by Miss Ida was deeply impressive. The altar service was conducted by Mrs. Vonholz, was a time of deep solemnity. A great many professions were given for a new baptism of power. One sinner was converted and one believer professed the blessing of perfect love.

Sunday, August 9th—The 6 a. m. prayer and praise service was conducted by Rev. John Devery. It was a fitting beginning of this important day.

The experience meeting, at 8 a. m., was conducted by Rev. C. J. Howes. At first the service was rather dull, but the exercise took a turn for the better and the interest arose steadily. At a midnight flame fervor characterized the exercise. Many spoke, frequently two on their feet at once. There was great rejoicing among saints and sinners felt the power.

Rev. John R. Eals, of Ashland, Ky., presided at 10:30 a. m. from Luke 19:14-27. "And while he was come to Jerusalem as unseen by his people, but seen by him as presented as the ground of his weeping. The application to those who abuse opportunity and privilege was forcible. Altogether it was an effort of signal ability. Several were blessed at the altar service following. The crowd was very large and generally serious and attentive.

A children's meeting was held at their chapel at 2 p. m., conducted by Miss Ida Vonholz. At the same time a young people's service in the tabernacle was conducted by Brother Abbott. Both these were well attended. At the meeting at the tabernacle quite a number were at the altar and some were blessed.

At 3 p. m. Rev. J. D. Walsh preached from Matthew 9: 2. "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Christ's readiness to forgive sins when opportunity is given, the opposition of enemies and the coldness of friends was set forth and the foolish excuses for not accepting him and his presence. A large number came to the altar and some went away rejoicing. A young people's meeting was held again at 7 p. m. Rev. A. M. Abbott presided. This meeting, also, there were a number spoke.

Mrs. Vonholz opened the 8 p. m. service with an exhortation and prayer, after which Miss Ida prayed and read from the 19th chapter of the book of John. The chapter gives a history of Christ's trial before Pilate. Miss Ida commented forcibly on the narrative applying the various points as she proceeded, closing with an earnest appeal to the congregation to accept Christ as a personal Savior. The invitation to the altar was responded to by several persons. Two joined the church at the close.

Tuesday morning there will be a memorial service for Rev. M. D. Murphy and wife at 10 a. m., at the Court. Wednesday morning quietly meeting service of Tellerboro circuit and in the afternoon temperance. Thursday, Dr. Bayless, editor of the Western Christian Advocate will preach twice. The work goes on. We are expecting greater things.

TOO MUCH "PARADING."

ONE OF THE EXCUSES GIVEN FOR THE CONDITION OF STOCKS.

Wheat and Corn Takes the Place of Railroads in Legitimate Speculation. Business Generally is a Dead Letter in Wall Street-Notes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Preparations for the funeral, and the funeral itself, considerably reduced the volume of business at the stock exchange during the last week. At all events this is the explanation which the bull manipulators give when discussing the decrease in the daily transactions. There can be no question that a large number of brokers and speculators belong to different military organizations, and had, therefore, to attend to what they call "parading" for the last three days of the week.

Apart from that a number of prominent Wall street men are, as usual at the season of the year, out of town, trying to re-investigate themselves for the coming autumn campaign. Others, again, left the city to avoid both the crowd gathered by the funeral and the market, which has some very treacherous elements about it. Everything on the list looks like a purchase, and is thus spoken of by all those who pretend to be insiders in the deal. But conservative people aver that all the cream has been taken off the market and that against a chance to make two or three points on the up track, there is an equal chance of losing ten points on the down track.

The most suspicious feature of the manipulation going on is the speculation which is being carried on by the leaders of the market, like New York Central, Lake Shore and the trunk lines generally, are sluggish and stationary, while the wild cars are steadily growing in favor. Points to buy Erie, Denver and other bankrupt stocks are given to every man, woman and child, yet there is absolutely nothing in the general situation of business either at home or abroad to warrant the purchase of even a single share of solid dividend paying securities, for they are from 10 to 15 per cent. higher than they were a month ago.

The Chicago market promises to be very lively for the next five or six weeks. The reports about the wheat crop continue to be unfavorable, though the authorities sending them out are constantly accused of "cooking" their statistics. There was unquestionably a great deal of damage done both to the winter and to the spring wheat, and long-headed Chicago and New York manipulators are said to be buying large quantities of wheat. The supply of this cereal has, of late, been much lacinated over the world that it seems absurd to expect much higher prices for it; yet, somehow or other, American grain speculators manage to keep prices up far beyond the exporting limit, and are still predicting one dollar a bushel for the cash wheat, for which eighty-eight cents at present seems to be a very high price.

The disquieting cables of the last two or three days in regard to the Afghani war complications are not likely to put prices up.

Corn and oats have already shown a considerable advance, and as a large short interest is reported in both, it would not be surprising to see them move still upward. People who have recently been selling corn short on the prospect of a magnificent crop may easily find themselves left with, for there is little old corn on hand in the country, and no new corn can come into the market before the middle of November. Yet this cereal is the most important grown upon this continent. While wheat is used only by man, corn is used by man, beast, whisky distillers, glucose and starch manufacturers, and a number of other consumers. And while every part of the globe produces wheat, none except the Danubian principalities and the south of Russia grown any corn at all. What the excepted countries do produce is consumed on the spot. America is thus without a competitor in the production of this staple, and if we have even as large a crop as is anticipated, it is sure to be all sold up at home and abroad before the crop of 1900 is planted.

Provisions have been maintained with much more success than could have been anticipated last week. Pork recovered some twenty-five cents a barrel from the lowest price, but summer packing was very active, the supply of hogs liberal, and if cholera should make further progress in Europe or appear on this continent, pork is bound to have a big further tumble.

Considering the artificial and manipulated nature of the stock market at the present moment there seems to be no question that the grain and provision market will form for some time to come a much safer field of speculation than the stock market presents. A man buying or selling grain or provisions has at least some statistics to base his operations on, while no one dealing in bonds or stocks can possibly find out what the crop of the securities and the demand for them will be.

Returning Home.
NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Col. Fred Grant and Ulysses S. Grant, with their wives and Mrs. Bartoris, who have been stopping at the Fifth Avenue hotel, have left for Mt. McGregor over the West Shore road. Jessie Grant and his wife did not accompany the other members of the family. Gen. Sherman started for home, and Gen. Sheridan also left. Gen. Pittsburg Lee is still at the St. James hotel. Vice President Hendricks has left the city. The vice president said that the funeral program was a grand and imposing spectacle. He declined to enter on any discussion of politics.

New Jersey Encampment.
TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 11.—The annual encampment of the New Jersey state militia will begin at 10 o'clock this morning. The ground was leased for the year, but it is hoped to have it purchased by the state before next summer. Governor Abbott expects to participate directly this season. Half down governors have been invited as guests. Governor Wetmore, of Rhode Island, has accepted. His staff will accompany him. The government has offered to erect a coat of arms for the state whenever the state secures a sea front as part of the land for a permanent encampment.

"Chaw Beet."
NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Gas Sundstrom and Daniel F. Butler answered to the charge of having engaged in a swimming exhibition in the East River in violation of Section 205 of the Penal Code. Charles Dobbin, twenty-one years old, of 135 Fulton street, who acted as manager of the affair, was also charged with a similar offense. All three were held for trial.
